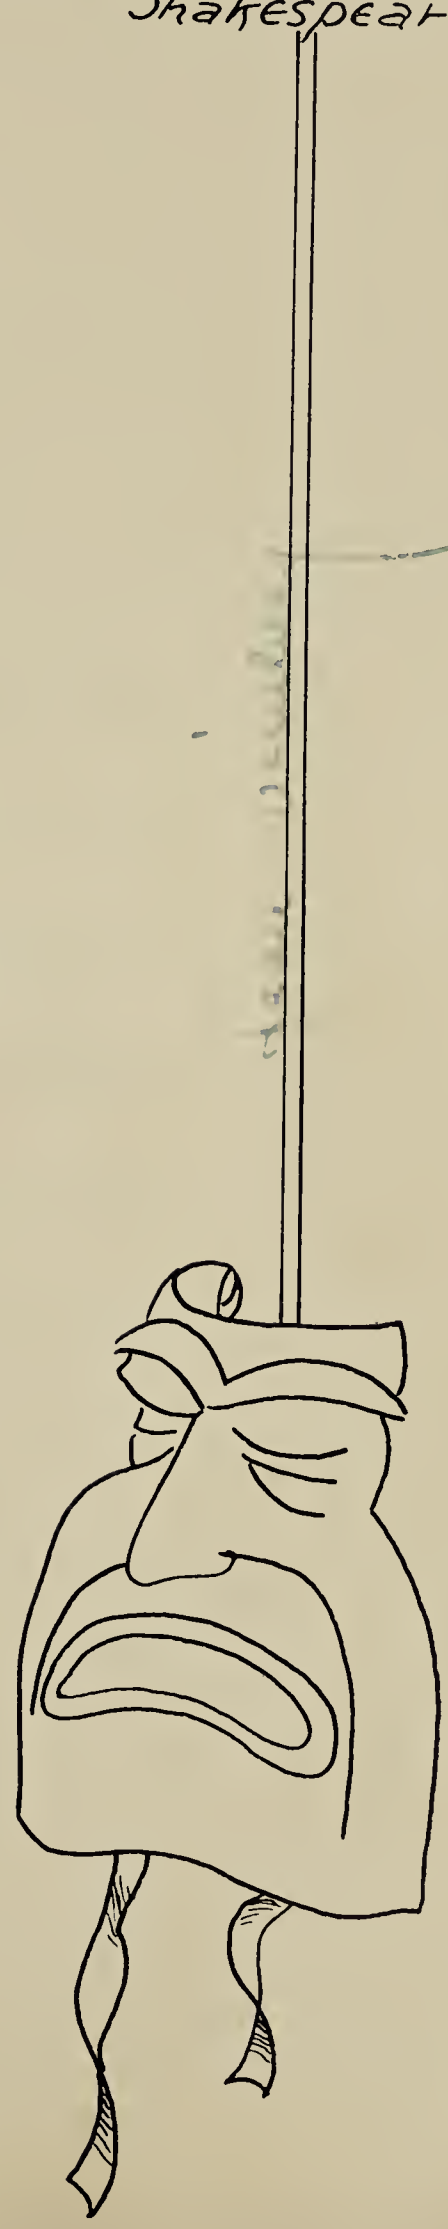
All the world's a stage —
Shakespeare



FOREWORD . . .

To set forth the spirit of beauty and inspiration purveyed by the theatre, to recall the faith and courage of those, who in the face of all obstacles, have contributed so generously to its demands, and to form a tangible background of memories of four years happily spent, we build this book.

THE PROGRAM

CLASS HISTORY, JANUARY CLASS

1927

A red-letter day early in September heralded the first curtain of the class of January, 1933. Local and out-of-town newspapers made little mention of the fact.

Now we were full-fledged Monroites; we sported shiny brief cases (not discarded until senior high) short pants, and yo yos (or weren't yo yos invented then?)

According to the Monroe Life, two seventh graders were found in the basement looking for Room 500, and a State School Board inspected the new cafeteria building and praised it highly about this time.

We saw our first senior play on November 18, when "It Pays to Advertise" was presented with Jack Kimble and Marguerite Weiner in the leads.

Do you remember when the first of our many revised constitutions was adopted in December? According to its authors, the new document "gave students control of every student activity in Monroe."

Well, well, how time flies! Here we are in September, 1929, members of the Junior Corps already. (The editor forbid us to make any cracks about the "Junior Corpse". Moreover, if you were writing a class history, you might skip a couple years too.)

We had our Junior Corps elections after a quorum was dragged around to the meeting. For the boys, John Chapman was chosen president, Donald Lewis, vice-president, Jack Park, secretary, and Ralph Sullivan, Social Chairman.

The girls elected Margaret Kellner, president; Jean Cannon, vice-president; Marie McWilliams, secretary; and Dorothy Weiner, social chairman (or is it charwoman?)

Students' Association elections also: MacRussell, president; Louis Teall, vice-president; (do you recall Hal Young's nomination speech?) Nat Arnot, secretary; Bob Burnam and John Keeler, cheer leaders.

We held our first Junior Corps dance October 25 in the boys' gym, after a series of dancing lessons. Cider and doughnuts were served; it was estimated Tom Plumb drank thirteen glasses of the former.

Preparations for publishing the "little red book", otherwise the Monroe Handbook, were under way. The little red book contained information about just everything in Monroe.

A few more of our aspiring classmates achieved fame about this time: Laurence Edelstein as standard bearer, Lila Benedict as daughter of the flag, and Stan Levey as a Monroe Life reporter.

Three new societies were formed in October and November: A Committee to Devise Ways and Means for Girls to Powder their Noses, the Committee for the Reinstatement of High School Football, and a club formed by Bob Reed and Art Rosenbloom whose pledges carried around the members' brief cases for two or three weeks.

1930

We presented a "gala and sparkling revue" before Junior Assembly on Moving-Up Day in January. The program featured several novelty numbers and "a bevy of beautiful girls" as a chorus.

Our big day came on January 24, when we graduated before a throng of parents and friends. (Do you remember walking across the stage for your diploma? What an ordeal!)

A play "The Bellman of Mons", a speech of welcome by Margaret Kellner, and presentation of the class gift (an institution now in hazy memory) featured the event.

THE PROGRAM (concluded)

Once more we visited the voting booths, with these results for our 10B officers: John Chapman, president; Stan Levey, vice-president; Donald Lewis, secretary; (he's never been the same since he started collecting dues) and Jane Lowell, social chairman.

We witnessed the presentation of "Les Americans Chez Nous", Monroe's fifth annual French play, with Shirley Olsan and Jerry Brown in the leads.

Hal Young's great socio-political epic, "The Heart of a Gangster", began its run in Monroe Life

Monroe Life revolutions in September, with Laurence Luescher editor and Hal Young running the paper. At this time Margaret Kellner, Art Rosenbloom, and Stan Levey graced the staff as reporters.

About now it was reported that Jack Peck passed the four foot mark and was on his way to greater heights.

Ben Greet and his Shakespearean players came to school presenting "As You Like It" and "Macbeth".

In February Monroe wiped the floor with East High's basketball team for the first time, 31-22, with Fine, Meyer, Zutes, Walter, and Winslow in the lineup.

In March our class began to break into the higher arts. Lee Geismar, Dorothy Weiner, and Stan Levey joined the Dramatics Club shortly after Margaret Kellner was voted into Pencil Pushers.

Our 11B Dramatists broke into the big time as they trod the boards in "The Youngest". In the cast were Eleanor Alexander, Dorothy Weiner, Margaret Kellner.

May 15; Delibert coaxes Burns into buying new font of type for Monroe Life

June: Delibert discards new font: Burns breaks down and weeps.

SEPTEMBER-JUNE
1931-1933

Class of January 1933 goes along its merry way taking time out to allow Art Rosenbloom to be Managing Editor of Kaleidoscope and Standard Bearer, Stan Levey editor-in-chief of Monroe Life and Monrolog, Kay Stackel Custodian, Al Henz Master Bowler, Laurie Edelstein President of the Honor Society, Bob Reed a handwriting expert, and Marie McWilliams the leading candidate for Marie Dressler's position as famous comedienne.

Then came the last great week of school with class-day programs, and banquets and Art Murrell-Wright subbing for Stan Levey at three hours' notice. And then graduation with a play "The Game of Chess" moving everyone to tears.

Then six months of P-G'ing and G-P'ing (grand-punning) to summer vacation—then goodbye to 'ole Monroe after electing Miss Charlotte Wescott beauty queen of parts near and far.

A little sentiment does not harm,—so

"Hold fast to the wheel, boys
Without a sound of noise
For soon the harbor lights are seen
And so—toodle-oo—ole bean"

—Yevel

1929

Sept.—We stepped into the wings to become understudy for the class of January, 1933, then the Jr. Corps.

1930

Jan.—We became the Jr. Corps with C. Russell Phelps as Standard Bearer and Louise Morgan as Custodian of the flag. The officers for the boys were Frank Butts, Joe Barnes, Fred Schulhafer, and Carter Gardner. Those for the girls were Carol Horton, Sue Vogt, Elizabeth De Rouy, and Ruth Gup.

April—First signs of agitation for separate Junior and Senior High officers. Mac Russell discovered why Monroeites sleep during classes.

June—One hundred and thirty-eight students cast ballots for designs for the Mural Decorations; the rest couldn't decide what they wanted.

June 16—Exams—our first Regents.

June 20—Graduation, featuring "A Spanish Fiesta." We contributed our class gift to the Mural Decoration Fund.

Sept.—No more Jr. Corps ties on Wednesday—real seniors! The student handbook first appeared.

October—Don W. Berry (then D. W. Berry) was elected Class President. The other officers were Bob Manuel, Sue Vogt, and Marietta Kuolt.

1931

Feb.—Fred Meyer, Joe Delibert, and Claire Meyer chosen school officers after a close count in which the adding machine was broken.

June—Exams, nice hot weather, and then some exams—and then vacation.

Sept.—Mr. Carver became head of the English Department, taking the place of George Carhart. Monroe took thirteen state scholarships (what a record for us to try to beat).

Nov.—A couple of homerooms forgot to vote for class officers, and our elections gave the Monroe Life something to write about. It all ended with Bob Manuel, Jack Mason, Louise Morgan, and Jim Geraghty as our officers.

1932

Jan.—The new school constitution was drawn up and voted on, and then everyone got out dictionaries to see what referendum and recall were.

Feb.—A new Monroe Life staff with us a part of it. Stan Levey, chief scribbler; Marg Kellner, his assistant; Reva Schoenberg and Art Rosenbloom, associate scribblers; Bob Reed, scribbler in charge of news; Ben Rosenthal, sports scribbler, and C. Russell Phelps, scribbler of editorials.

Mar.—Mr. Hawley as Anthony Absolute in "The Rivals", Miss Abbott as Mrs. Malaprop, scrambling her language.

April—Our Jr. play, "Skidding". Ted Cox and Marietta Kuolt in the leads; Scott Sterling, Irving Davis, Gladys Sobie, Joann Guggenheimer, Ben Rosenthal, Ruth Gustafson, Mildred Taylor, and Charles Harris also acted. Eight members of our class were taken into National Honor Society.

June—New school officers with two, Jack Mason, vice-president, and Bob Manuel, secretary, from our class. The others were Ed Trax and Jack Harby.

June 21—Some more exams, followed by a long vacation in which to get ready for our final year.

Sept.—At last, 12 B's, all rested, almost ready for the final curtain.

Oct.—Corridor Aides were instituted to be a cross between a policeman and an information bureau. Joe Barnes, Bob Manuel, Sue Vogt, and Anne Russell elected our senior class officers.

Jan.—C. Russell Phelps and Helene Berman, Standard Bearer and Custodian of the flag respectively (or is it respectably?). Someone began to analyze the cafeteria food.

Feb.—At last—WE are the Seniors! It's funny, we don't feel any different than last month. School elections, more work for the adding machine. Jack Mason, president, Ted Cox, vice-president, Bill Hoot, secretary. Eleanor Partridge the second girl editor-in-chief of the Monroe Life.

March—Something was wrong with citizenship marks and no one knew what, so they didn't give us any. Someone renewed the annual cap-and-gown-for-graduation idea.

April—"The Swan", first all-school production, with Esther Williams and Stan Levey in the leading roles, and Jane Sullivan doing the most talking. The Experimental Theater presented Betsy Lane's "Coronation", and Bill Sanderson did look like Napoleon!

June 15—Class Day, with an assembly program in the morning and a dinner dance at the Sagamore at night. Did someone mention exams next week?

June 19—EXAMS—why say more?

June 27—CURTAIN

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

Class of January 1933
Class of June 1933

To Whom It may Concern:

WHEREAS:

We, the 1933 graduates of Monroe High School, in spite of our long sojourn here, are still of sound mind;

WHEREAS:

Our graduation from Monroe marks the end of an era of (1) disgusting daily disturbances in the library, (2) profuse platitudinous punning, (3) heated harangues on recognition of Russia.

WHEREAS:

The publication of the Monrolog has at last brought to a close the eight months Reign of Terror in Mr. Carver's office;

We, therefore, graduates and P.G.'s (Privileged Graduates), do hereby declare that the contents of the following paragraphs constitute our last will and testament:

(1) To Industrious Latin Students (who are skilled in reading between the lines)
We bequeath our Caesars and Ciceros—guaranteed to please (our writing is legible).

(2) To King Carver
We restore (1) one office—No. 221, (2) The use of his swivel chair and private telephone (confiscated during the Reign of Terror by the Monrolog Staff).

(3) To the administration in the Main Office
We restore uninterrupted use of the personnel card file.

(4) To the Outside Patrol
One brand new set of cross-walks.

(5) To the Deputy Force
A Maxim Silencer for quiet corridors.

(6) To the Girls' Gym
A bushel of star-dust for future dances.

(7) To Ted Cox's Orchestra
A dozen feather-dusters.

(8) To Mr. Sliker
A hearty round of applause

(9) To the International Relations Club
We turn over all our Foreign Policies.

One Library where you may get a book if you know the right people.

Approved—V. J. Morgan

With this edition, MONROLOG again becomes an annual. This change is made in the interests of the clubs which bore the brunt of expenses in the publication of a semi-annual book. In editing MONROLOG the board of editors has attempted to record an accurate picture of the school's history during the past year. The theme of the book is significant of the rapid strides made by the students along theatrical lines, as is evidenced by several night plays, and the success of the Experimental Theatre.

The Monroe Players present Ferenc Molnar's Romantic Comedy

The Swan

Directed by Harold G. Sliker

The cast in order of their appearance:

Dr. Hans Agi	Stanley V. Levey
George	Charles Sherwood
Arsene	Jack Fahy
Princess Beatrice	Jane Sullivan
Alexandra	Esther Williams
Father Hyacinth	Seth Shaver
Symphorosa	Marie McWilliams
Prince Albert	Thomas Stapleton
Colonel Wunderlich	Allen Walker
Count Lutzen	Edward Trax
Alfred, a butler	Harold Hoffman
Caesar, a butler	Clarence Clift
Lackeys	William Munger and Richard Samuels
Ladies-in-waiting	Barbara Cook, Lucile Drennan
Maid	Betty Gilray
Princess Maria Dominica	Helen Patterson

Concerning the play:

Ferenc Molnar, Hungary's most distinguished dramatist, was first introduced to the American theater by the late David Belasco. But his real acclaim in this country came with the New York Theater Guild's presentations of two of his plays, "The Guardsman" and "Lilliom". "The Swan", his first play following the World War, received almost immediate international recognition; upon its presentation in Paris, Molnar was awarded the Cross of the Legion of Honor. The play is a bitter and unrelenting satire upon royalty and outworn court-customs; and is admitted by even George Bernard Shaw to be dramatically important.

The Senior Opera Chorus presents

H. M. S. Pinafore

A Comic Opera, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan

Directed by Eva L. Wannemacher and Harold G. Sliker

Josephine	Mary Jane Fouts

And a Chorus of Sixty.

Concerning the Opera:

Perhaps the best known of the Gilbert and Sullivan collaborations, "Pinafore" is a tuneful, pleasing opera. Its presentation at Monroe was marked by the excellence of the cast and the fine performance of the large chorus. The story of the Admiral who worked his way into Parliament by polishing door knobs 'til they shone was well received by a large and appreciative audience. Numbered in the cast were James Robinson, prize schoolboy baritone in the eastern states, and Clarence Clift, third in the same class.

Starting with an inexperienced team Coach Michelsen developed an aggregation which in the second half race bowled over a majority of its foes. Outstanding were the two victories over East and the first win to be gained over Franklin.

As we go to press, the Redjacket baseball team seems to have all that is necessary for a championship team. In several pre-season games, the outfit has shown a power both offensively and defensively which bodes no good for the opposition.

With a team of practically all new material, Coach Ackley developed a strong squad which finished second in the scholastic league, suffering but one defeat in the entire season. Next year the team ought to come out on top.

The fin-shakers enjoyed a successful season, winning both their league meets and placing third in the scholastic meet. A better score for the Red and Blue might have resulted had Coach Wallace been able to muster his entire team strength from the exam rooms.

Bill Winslow, No. 1 Man, was the victor in the National Boys' Tennis Tournament doubles event and runner-up in the singles match. It is expected that Winslow will receive a high rating in the boys' list.

The Monroe team with four verterans back should place high in the league standing.

Being the story of a youth who gave up his love and honor for the glory of the Red and Blue (or was it the Black and Blue?)

The characters are a man named Herman and his other self, called Philomelia. (You will note that this drama already bears a startling O'neillian (or Onion?) atmosphere), not to mention the heroine Eucalyptus called Eucalyptus by some, and Anastatia Cornelia Winterbottom "Schnozzola" Eucalyptus by others for short. We think it best to ring in a door bell for a property and to throw a little light on the play with a flashlight which may be used as a lamp or as a cucumber in the dinner scene.

For the best purposes of the play and to insure safety to the actors, it would be best to perpetrate the masterpiece on a completely dark stage, and since all the talking is done by pantomime you will readily realize the effect on the audience. Or better still if you have a deserted barn you may attempt the drama there by charging one pin, and if this is not forthcoming, try bribing the pigs to stick around and see it.

The second scene of the rendition has too many characters for the stage. In this case the authors advise staging it in the audience and allowing the latter the free run of the platform. The play which was written to run for six days, 17 and one-half hours can, by inconsiderate cutting be lopped off to a comprehensive thirteen minute drama. This however will entail leaving out a majority of the characters, making the hero a Canadian Northwest Mounted Police instead of a rum runner, and changing the heroine from a social worker to a dairy maid in a Swiss cheese factory (holy smokes). With a little ingenuity something tangible and satisfying can be gleaned out of the accomplishment.

In one of the latter scenes the heroine is visited by seven maiden aunts. If, for any reasons, seven maiden aunts are not available, ordinary ants may be imported (we are sure the audience will not notice the discrepancy in spelling) and the play changed in to a super-animal production.

As for makeup, it should be thoroughly understood that as conscientious purists and moralists, the authors will refuse permission to any company to present their achievement if makeup of any sort is to be used. However in the event that the hero at any time feels in the need of a cigarette he is encouraged and urged to smoke (providing he uses only Lucky Chesters).

Enough of these directions, then, and on to the play.

Scene I: An opium den, otherwise known as the "men's room" or "Pirate Roost" at Monroe High School. The place is clouded with smoke and perfume vapor. A man gropes his way to the footlights reeling in a thoroughly naughtical (or is it naughty) fashion. He speaks (you will notice of course that all dialogue is in verse).

Herman: Being on the faculty is not much fun
It's with difficulty
That I make any mon (abbreviation for money)

at this point another figure enters, approaches the first man and says

Eucalyptus: I really see your plight
my dearest hubby.
Your bow tie is a sight
and your collar is rather grubby.

This really has nothing to do with the play, but is inserted for euphony.

Editor's note (The Editors regret cutting short this sure-fire drama but it is time to turn the page, and since no provision has been made for this emergency we leave you with the hope that you will turn the page and forget the play) or have you read it at all?
